CBOE to Launch Options on FTSE Emerging Index

- Yesterday, CBOE announced plans to launch options on the FTSE Emerging Index (FTEM) on September 26.
- The FTSE Emerging Index is a market-capitalization weighted index representing the performance of large and mid-cap companies from advanced and secondary emerging markets. The index is derived from markets within the FTSE Global Equity Index Series (GEIS), which gives investors a comprehensive way to measure the performance of the most liquid companies in the global emerging markets.
- For details, read the press release. See CBOE Regulatory Circular RG16-152 for a product description and margin and net capital requirements for FTEM options. For information on operational system settings for FTEM options, view CBOE Regulatory Circular RG16-153. For contract specifications, visit the microsite.
